

Lecture 11

Structure and Elements of Argumentative Writing

- It opens by introducing the controversial issue that is to be argued.
- Support the claim and refute the opposing view.

Classical Pattern

Introduction

Hook

Background Information

Thesis Statement

Body

Proof

Present the heart of your argument.

Refutation

Showing what is wrong of others' opinions.

Conclusion

Unit 2 The Primary Purpose of Education--How to Make a Good Claim

What is a claim

A claim is the statement of one's position on a particular issue and appears as a statement of fact, definition, value or policy.

A counterclaim is a claim set up in opposition to a previous claim.

Types of Claim

Objective Claim

Claims of Fact

Something is true or not true.

Subjective Claim

Claims of Values

Something is good or bad, more or less desirable.

Claims of Policy

One course of action is superior to another.

Sentence 1: Writing a "General Statement" Based on Prompt

- Vaccinating children against preventable diseases is not unnecessary but also dangerous. Nowadays, more and more vaccinating children express their suspicion of its function of preventable diseases