

Lecture 6

Unit 4 Relationship--Classification and Division

Classification-division Essay

It is a type of text structure that involves organizing information in which writers sort items into categories according to commonalities.

Classification and Division (P 103)

Classification means the act or process of sorting out ideas, objects or people into various types that are whole and independent. (Commonality)

Division refers to the act or process of breaking down the ideas, objects or people into the smaller groups that are interdependent. (Difference)

Key Steps (P 103)

- Establish the single principle, which helps us sort things logically and systematically.
- Determine the categories.
- Exemplify each category.

Example (Activity 5 P 104)

About Listening

When listening, focus on doing notes rather than reading the questions.